STILL OPERATORS RUIN DWELLING AT MOKENA

Mrs. F. M. Storey, a former Mokena resident, now residing in Jonesville, Michigan, had a surprise of her life the past week when she came to Mokena and found that her old home south of town which she had rented to a Chicago party last winter, had been used for housing an illicit still and was just about ruined.

She had been receiving her rent regularly so had not thought about investigating the renters. About two weeks ago the renters disappeared over night after another property owner near the Storey place had threatened to turn the bootleggers in to the Federal authorities. Mokena friends wrote to Mrs. Storey telling her to come to Mokena to look after her property interests and when she and her son Chester arrived here the fore part of the week, they were astounded to find that a good sized still had been in operation in their old home. Holes had been chopped in the floors, walls and even the chimney for pipes and other appliances of the still apparatus. The place was full of mash fumes and the yard was littered with empty tin cans. The dwelling was badly damaged by the still operators.

Crete Man Heads Will-Cook County Hollstein Club

Walter Labhardt of Crete was elected president of the Will-Cook Hollstein club at the annual meeting Monday evening in the Woodman hall in Frankfort. He replaces John H. Cryder of Plainfield. The new vice president is Herman Bormet of Mokena while Arthur Tegtmeyer of Beecher was elected secretary-treasurer.

Hollstein dairying has enjoyed a steadily rising market during the past two years and the outlook is excellent for the next few years because of the shortage of good cows and heifers, said E. M. Clark of Chicago, field representative for the Hollstein-Friesian Breeders' Association of America.

Fifty percent of all registered cattle are Hollsteins, he said. Further figures to prove the superiority of this breed, he continued, is revealed in the fact that 81 percent of the cows with a 1,000-pound butter fat record are Hollsteins.

Mr. Clark believes that the soil conservation program will increase and hay and pasturing for dairy herds.

"Encourage breeding circles with four or five farmers co-operating by exchanging their bulls in an attempt to build up their milk production," the speaker urged. "Records should be kept in order to determine the gains made."

Already one breeding circle is assured for Will county and several others are being worked out.

The black and white dairy field day for Illinois sponsored this year by the Tri-County Hollstein club of Kane, DuPage and DeKalb counties was announced.

Refreshments concluded the meeting.

Mrs. Roy Krapp New Head of Mokena PTA

The Mokena PTA held their annual election of officers in the Mokena school auditorium Tuesday night. The officers elected are:

President, Mrs. Roy Krapp; Vice-president, Mrs. Helen Pfleger; Second vice-president, Miss Mildred Dolg; Secretary, Mrs. Adolph Steen and Treasurer, Mrs. John Walsh.

Following the election of officers a program was rendered. Among the numbers were readings by Miss Bernice Hostert and Jean Schevin; songs by the school children.

The PTA is planning for a card and bunco party to be given in the very near future. The date is to be announced next week. The proceeds will be used to purchase additional chairs for the school auditorium.

Attorney to Collect Delinquent Licenses of Orland Taverns

The Orland Park Village board is starting a collection campaign against local tavern keepers who are delinquent in paying their tavern licenses. Those tavern keepers who are delinquent will now have to pay extra as the cases have been turned over to the village attorney, A. H. Krusemark for collection.

The delinquent tavern keepers are to be notified of the board's action by the village attorney and given 10 days in which to pay up or lose their licenses.

New Lenox School Band to Present Band Concert

The New Lenox school band, under the direction of R. B. Wight, will present its first annual concert, May 1st at 8 p. m. in the school auditorium.

The Band was organized last September and has a personnel of thirty players. At the time of organizing, a band association was formed which has been active throughout the year, in raising funds to purchase some much needed instruments.

The proceeds from this concert and the band's tax day, will be used to purchase uniforms for the band.

Officers of the band association are: Mr. Gurley, president; Mrs. A. Bruns, secretary; Mrs. Corp, treasurer.

Following is the program for Friday night's concert:

Mokena Business Men to Assist In Memorial Program

The Mokena Business Men's Association at their monthly meeting held Monday night in the C. A. Mitchell Club Room, reported very good results so far with their weekly awards and reported that about 30,000 or more coupons are given out each month. These coupons are only given with cash purchases and this shows that considerable business is stimulated by this plan.

The Club considered activities for the summer and a committee was appointed to investigate what activities can best be promoted and to report at the next meeting of the Association which will be the last Monday in May.

The Business Men's Association also voted to co-operate with the News-Bulletin in sponsoring a Memorial Day program. In other years the News-Bulletin has sponsored a Memorial Day program alone. A committee has been appointed to work with the editor in arranging for the program and the decorating of the soldiers graves in the St. Mary, St. John and the Old Settlers cemeteries in and about Mokena. Watch for more particulars later and do not fail to attend the Memorial Day exercises which will be held in the Mokena public school auditorium on Memorial Day morning.

SEDAN PRAIRIE 4-H SUNSHINE CLUB NEWS

A meeting was held in the home of our club leader, Mrs. Kampe, on April 25, for the re-organization and election of officers for the coming year.

We were glad to have several new members join. They were: Clara Steinhorn, Elvira Stuckey, Wilma Meyers and Margaret Andres. The Dolling Sisters and Lucille Siebrandt were not present but plan also to join.

The following officers were elected: President, Sylvia Feigel; Vice president, Mildred Zummallen; Secretary, Rose Bormet; Recreation chairman, Wilma Meyer; Club reporter, Bernilda Stuckey and Assistant Leader, Mildred Zummallen.

Miss Bernilda Stuckey gave a talk on "Why I Joined The 4-H Club."

Our county leader, Mr. Glover, was present and gave a very interesting talk. Refreshments were served.

The annual spring rally will be held Monday May 11 in the home of our Leader, Mrs. Kampe. We hope all club members will be present.

New Police Chief For Tinley Park

For several weeks the Tinley Park village board and mayor August Habenicht have been unable to agree on the appointment of a police chief to succeed Harry Uthe who resigned several weeks ago.

The business people of Tinley Park felt that the village was in need of police protection and at a recent meeting at which the village board and the mayor were present, the matter of appointing a police chief was taken up but the village officials and the mayor could not come to a definite agreement regarding the appointment of a police chief, but last Saturday the board finally appointed C. A. Steinhagen, chief of police even though Mayor Habenicht had not signed his credentials. Chief Steinhagen is now chief of police of Tinley Park.

Chas. Scheer Member of Frankfort Grocery Firm Dies Suddenly

Frankfort and the entire country side was deeply shocked Wednesday noon when the news spread that Charles Scheer, member of the store firm of Scheer & Stellwagen of Frankfort, had died very suddenly at his home about 12:30 while seated at the dinner table. Mrs. Scheer was also seated at the table when a sudden heart attack seized Mr. Scheer and he died within a few seconds.

Mr. Scheer had been in good health up to a few months ago when he suffered a severe flu attack which left his heart weak.

Charles N. Scheer was born near Frankfort, October 26, 1874. He was baptised and confirmed in and was a life-long member of the St. Peter Evangelical church in Frankfort.

In 1909 he was united in marriage with Miss May Populorum of Chicago. To this union were born one son and two daughters, the son dying in infancy.

With the exception of two years residence in Mokena, Mr. and Mrs. Scheer spent the rest of their married life in Frankfort.

Surviving are the widow, two daughters, Mrs. Stanley Johnson of Joliet, Miss Florence Scheer at home, two brothers, John Scheer, Frankfort, Ferdinand Scheer of Manhattan; one sister, Mrs. Paul Heisner of Manhattan.

Funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon at 1:30 at the late home and at 2 o'clock in the St. Peter Evangelical church in Frankfort. Rev. G. S. Gerhold will officiate. Burial will be made in Pleasant Hill Cemetery, Frankfort.

Farm advisers are instructors who teach farmers how to do for themselves. J. C. Spitzer of Urbana, state leader of farm advisers said Tuesday night at a farm bureau meeting at Mokena. One hundred were present for one of the largest gatherings ever held by the group.

Mr. Spitzer traced the extension service movement from its conception in 1907 in Texas by Dr. Seaman A. Knapp to its present far flung program throughout the country. Illinois had its first extension service in 1912 and a year later Will county was the third in the state to establish one, known as the soil crop association.

The idea behind the extension movement is the demonstration principle, whereby farmers learn by doing. Great advances have been made in farming through the service, said Mr. Spitzer. Besides crop and livestock improvement, the extension service is now educating and helping farmers in cooperating for marketing and buying purposes.

Arlo Nicholson of Elwood conducted the games following the talk. There was community singing and the farm bureau orchestra, directed by Lawrence Kohl of Mokena played several selections. Refreshments were served.

Plan For Buddy Poppy Campaign

For many past years, the approach of Memorial Day, May 30, has been heralded by the distribution of "Buddy Poppies," under the auspices of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States.

The steady increase in veterans' disabilities, due to advancing age, has brought untold hardship and privation to the men who comprised America's armed forces in the World War and previous hostilities.

It is not generally recognized that there are approximately half a million permanently disabled World War veterans in this country who are receiving no benefits whatever from the government. Another 600,000 veterans are unemployed, due to general economic conditions, and of the 340,000 World War veterans who are receiving compensation for service connected disabilities, only half of them are receiving $30 a month or more with which to provide all the necessities of life for themselves and their dependents.

When you add to such figures, widows and orphans of the 80,000 World War veterans who are dying each year, it is easy to understand why the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States faces a crying need, both nationally and locally, for the funds with which to finance its program of assistance and service to our disabled comrades and their dependents.

This explains the traditional purposes of the Buddy Poppy campaign and the increasing need for its expansion as a source of revenue for V. F. W. relief and welfare work among disabled veterans and the widows and orphans of former veterans.

Orland Postmaster In Hospital

Postmaster A. J. Toelle of Orland Park who has been ill for sometime, with an infection, has been growing worse of late and was removed to St. Francis hospital in Blue Island last Saturday for treatment.

NEW DENTAL PARLOR OPENS IN FRANKFORT

Dr. B. J. Rooth of Chicago has opened a dental office in the Folkers Building in Frankfort in the same location formerly occupied by Dr. Seron. Read Dr. Rooth's announcement in this issue for further details regarding hours, etc.

WM. KROHN SUCCUMBS TO LONG ILLNESS

Wm. F. Krohn, aged 33 years of Mokena, who has been in poor health for a year and a half, died Tuesday morning in the Silver Cross hospital, Joliet where he had been a patient for the past two weeks.

Mr. Krohn was born January 31, 1903 in Lockport. He came to this locality in 1923 and in July 1925 he was united in marriage with Miss Ella Yunker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Yunker of Mokena. To this union five children were born.

Surviving are the widow, four sons, Wade, Jean, Dale, Glenn and one daughter, Carol, the father, four brothers and four sisters.

Funeral services were held Thursday afternoon at 1:30 at the late home thence to the Immanuel Lutheran church in Mokena with Rev. Walter Geffert officiating. Interment was made in the Lutheran cemetery southeast of Mokena.

Orland Fire Dept. Named First Aid Station for Red Cross

The Orland Park Volunteer Fire Department of which John N. Helenhouse is the chief, had a very distinct honor conferred on it the past week when the American Red Cross Society designated the Orland Park Fire Dept., as the first aid station in this part of southern Cook County. Monday, Donald Bennett, field representative of the American Red Cross brought the full first aid equipment to Chief Helenhouse, also a large sign to be erected on the Southwest Highway calling attention to the first aid station in Orland Park. Chief Helenhouse will be in charge and in case of any accident in this section a call to 200 Orland Park will bring the first aid service.

Chief Helenhouse and members of the Orland Park Fire Dept., took the Red Cross First Aid course in 1934 and passed the examination with high honors as attested by the certificate Chief Helenhouse now holds.

Frankfort Twp. To Have Float In Centennial Parade

Frankfort township is making preparations to be represented in the celebration of Will County's Centennial by way of entering a float depicting some historical feature of the township.

A meeting was held in the Mokena village hall Tuesday night to consider plans for a float and to determine what type of float should represent Frankfort township. This was found to be a rather hard task so another meeting will be held at the same hall Friday night of this week to finally determine just what kind of a float Frankfort township will enter in the county parade. Those attending the meeting Tuesday night were: Supervisor Wm. Kampe, Mayor George Sangmeister, Henry Luhring, Mrs. C. F. Schellhase, Mrs. George Andrew, Mrs. Wm. Lankenau and Mrs. W. V. Hedges, all of Frankfort; Mayor Edward Marti, Commissioner of Highways, Emil D. Cappel, Editor Wm. Semmler, R. Hensel, Mrs. Albert Braun and Mrs. John Balaz of Mokena.

Getting Ready For Baseball

A practice session will be held on the Hayden diamond in Mokena this Friday evening.

Boy Scouts Are Reorganized

The Mokena Boy Scout Troop which has been dormant since the last scout master Mr. Kelly moved away, has been revived again. Under the new organization the lineup is as follows:

Scout Master, Hugh Tierney; Assistant Scout Leaders, Erwin McGovney, Leonard Bruder and Bristol Laufer, Board of Trustees, Ona E. McGovney, Elmer L. Cooper, Lawrence Kohl, Bennie Benson and J. H. Nordal. Thus far fifteen boy scouts have been registered.

Orland Board Rejects Rubbish Bids

The Orland Park Village Board rejected all the bids received Monday night for hauling and disposing of the village rubbish. The cold weather caused a larger accumulation of ashes and as a result the bids for hauling the rubbish popped up to nearly four times what they were a year ago when the job was taken for $25. The bids received Monday night ran from $100, $125 to $150 and were all rejected as too high by the village board. It was decided to re-advertise for new bids to be handed in for the special village board meeting called for next Monday night.

To Hold Card Party

St. Jude's church of New Lenox will sponsor a card and bunco party in the New Lenox public school auditorium Wednesday night, May 6th. Everyone is invited.

STOCK DIES WHEN LIGHTNING STRIKES BARN

Lightning is blamed for a barn fire in New Lenox last night which caused the destruction of two horses and two cows.

The farm on which the barn was situated is owned by Frank Skoien, of Joliet, and is rented by Joseph Kline, of Manhattan, whose 19-year-old stepson, Walter Diamond, operates the farm. Young Diamond endangered his own life in an effort to save the stock in the barn and did manage to lead one horse to safety.

Lightning struck the barn at the height of a rain storm shortly before 10:30 o'clock Tuesday night. The huge frame structure burned like tinder and was beyond saving by the time a volunteer bucket brigade could be formed.

Three horses and two cows were quartered in the barn, and Diamond turned his attention to saving the stock. He led one of the horses out of the burning structure, but neighbors would not allow him to return a second time.

An oat binder stored in the barn was also lost. There was no other equipment of value housed in the structure. Kline was unable to estimate the loss, which was partially covered by insurance, both for the barn and the stock.

The farm is located on the Lincoln highway about a mile east of New Lenox. Directly across the road from the burning barn was the home of J. C. Brisbane. Witnesses said that had there been a strong wind, the Brisbane home would have been destroyed too.

Sues County For Attorney Fees

C. M. Cleveland of Frankfort Township has filed a suit for $5,000 for attorney fees against Will county. The suit has been started in the county court before Judge George N. Blatt. Mr. Cleveland is seeking to have the county reimburse him attorney fees he incurred while defending a condemnation suit brought by the county in connection with a right of way for Wolf road thru the Cleveland farm. Attorney A. H. Krusemark for the county has asked that the hearing on the case be continued.

Former Orland Resident Dies

Mrs. Ada Mitchell, aged 82 years, wife of the late John D. Mitchell widely known former conductor on the Wabash suburban service and a resident of Orland Park for 35 years died quite suddenly in the St. Bernard hospital in Chicago last Saturday.

The only survivor is a grandson, Paul Mitchell.

Funeral services were held from a funeral chapel in Chicago Wednesday afternoon with burial in the Palos cemetery, Rev. Paul T. Sanders of the Southwest Community Center Foundation of Palos Park officiating.

Mr. Mitchell died several years ago and since his death, Mrs. Mitchell has been living in a hotel in Chicago.

Mokena Board Plans Cleanup Day

The Mokena village board will meet next Tuesday night at which time bids for hauling the village rubbish will be considered.

Douglas R. (Gaga) Mills accepted the appointment as head varsity basketball coach at the University of Illinois.

Michael Loftus, eighty-nine, prominent Champaign county resident, died at Ivesdale of pneumonia.

Mrs. Guy Perisho, thirty-five years old, was killed in an automobile crash near Paris. Her husband was injured critically.

Mrs. Magdalena Michels, a resident of Aurora for 80 years, died there in St. Charles hospital. She was ninety-one years old.

Mrs. Magdalene Wageman Dully, ninety-six, resident of Morton township near Bloomington, died. She had lived in the township for 71 years after coming to America from Germany.

Gov. Henry Horner appointed Charles W. Terry, Edwardsville attorney, to be a member of the state tax commission, filling the vacancy left by the recent resignation of John C. Martin.

Miss Neva Sloan, high school teacher in Charleston, has a class of 35 students every one of whose last name begins with the letter "S," as does that of the teacher.

Albert M. Lambert, publisher of the Harvey Tribune, a weekly newspaper, for the last 30 years, died of heart disease at his home in Harvey. He was sixty-four years old.

James Haggard, seventy-three, farmer, residing near Orient, committed suicide by firing a charge from a shotgun into his heart. Ill health was assigned as the cause.

With two hundred applications for old age assistance already approved, the state department of public welfare started the issuance of old age assistance certificates to be payable May 1, 1936.

George Wascher, thirty years old, of Garden Prairie, Boone county, died in the Evanston hospital of burns received as he worked on a scaffold 50 feet high at the Glenview water storage plant. With two other workmen Wascher was scraping paint from the tank, when sparks from a blow torch ignited paint in a can beside him.

Seven men were initiated into the Caisson club, honorary military fraternity on the University of Illinois campus. They were: Julian Kaufman, Ray C. Constable, Russell J. Keeler and J. T. Deichman, all of Chicago; Robert M. Dole, Mattoon; E. E. Van der Heyden, Whitehall, and Donald F. Barkley, Yorkville.

Three PWA workers were killed in a cave-in of about 50 cubic yards of earth in a 15-foot excavation for the foundation of an addition to the La Salle-Peru township high school. A fourth man was buried up to his neck but was taken out alive. The dead were Peter Campo and Steve Urech, both of Chicago, and Frank Just of Peru. The bodies, which were badly crushed, were recovered. Edward Schoessler of Peru was the man injured.

Citizens of St. Charles gathered excitedly at their city hall as the cry of "Oil, they've struck oil!" ran through the town. At the city hall the mayor, Dr. I. G. Langum, proudly displayed five glass jugs of a thick brownish fluid. He put on a demonstration of how it burned with a bright flame. The oil came from a deep water well being drilled for the city of St. Charles by the C. W. Varner company of Dubuque, Iowa.

Pollution of the Illinois river from downstate sources has been reduced by two-thirds during the last two years, as a result of the stream conservation program sponsored by Governor Horner, and the outlook now is that the sanitation of this stream will be practically completed by 1938, according to a report issued by Dr. Frank J. Jirka, state health director. Industrial waste and other contaminating matter equivalent to the sewage discharge from 2,000,000 people has been eliminated from the river since 1934, he said, and plans for cutting off an amount equivalent to sewage from another 750,000 people are expected to be completed within the next 60 days.

Richard Yates, who was governor of Illinois from 1901 to 1905, and congressman at large from 1919 to 1933, died in the Leland hotel in Springfield, where he had made his home for years. Mr. Yates was seventy-five years old. Mrs. Helen Wadsworth Yates, to whom the ex-governor was married in 1888, was with him when he died. Also at the bedside were his daughters, Mrs. John L. Pickering of Detroit and Mrs. John W. Henderson of Glasgow, Scotland, and his son-in-law, Mr. Pickering. Mr. Yates had been seriously ill for months, but his condition had shown a turn for the better and his death was unexpected. Mr. Yates was born at Jacksonville, Ill. He was the son of Richard Yates, who was governor of Illinois from 1861 to 1865 and United States senator from 1865 to 1871. He attended Illinois college at Jacksonville in the class of 1880 and was a schoolmate there of William Jennings Bryan.

Willard Elise, a farmer north of Cambridge, was digging postholes when a board stopped his progress. He took an ax and chopped through to discover a box containing 100 sticks of dynamite. The box bore the name of a Kewanee mercantile firm.

LIGHTFOOT DISCOVERS LOVE

WONDERFULLY handsome was Lightfoot the Deer as he stood in the little opening by the pond of Paddy the Beaver, his head thrown back proudly as he received the congratulations of his neighbors of the Green Forest who had seen him win the great fight with the big stranger who had come down from the Great Mountain. To beautiful Miss Daintyfoot, peeping out from a thicket where she had hidden to watch the great fight, Lightfoot was the most wonderful person in all the Great World. She adored him, which means that she loved him just as much as it was possible for her to love.

But Lightfoot didn't know this. In fact he didn't know that Miss Daintyfoot was there. His one thought had been to drive out of the Green Forest the big stranger who had come down from the Great Mountain. He had been jealous of that big stranger, though he hadn't known that he was jealous. The real cause of his anger which he was sure were the most beautiful eyes in all the Great World.

He wondered if she would disappear and run away as she had the last time he saw her. He took a step or two forward. The beautiful head was withdrawn. Lightfoot's heart sank; then he bounded forward into the thicket. He more than half expected to find no one there, but when he entered that thicket he received the most wonderful surprise in all his life.

There stood Miss Daintyfoot, timid, bashful, but with a look in her eyes which Lightfoot could not mistake. In that instant Lightfoot understood the meaning of that longing which had kept him hunting for her, and of the rage which had filled him when he had discovered the presence of the big stranger from the Great Mountain.

He Wondered If She Would Disappear and Run Away.

and desire to fight had been the fear that the big stranger would find Miss Daintyfoot and take her away. Of course this was nothing but jealousy.

Now that the great fight was over and he knew that the big stranger was hurrying back to the Great Mountain, all Lightfoot's anger melted away. In its place was a great longing, a longing to find Miss Daintyfoot. His great eyes became once more soft and beautiful. In them was a look of wistfulness. Lightfoot walked down to the edge of the water and drank, for he was very, very thirsty. Then he turned, intending to once more take up his search for beautiful Miss Daintyfoot.

When he turned he faced the thicket in which Miss Daintyfoot was hiding. His keen eyes caught a little movement of the branches. A beautiful head was slowly thrust out and Lightfoot gazed into a pair of soft eyes

VARIED RECIPES

THIS is the time of the year to enjoy a good cake. The following will be one worth keeping on hand:

Orange Cream Cake.

Cream one-third of a cupful of fat with one cupful of sugar, add two beaten eggs, a pinch of salt, two tablespoonfuls of grated orange rind and one-half cupful of orange juice with two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, added alternately with two cupfuls of flour and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder well sifted. Pour into two layer pans and bake 20 minutes. Cool and add:

Orange Filling.

Blend one-third of a cupful of sugar, three tablespoonfuls of flour, a pinch of salt together. Add one-half cupful of orange juice, two tablespoonfuls of grated orange rind, a tablespoonful of grated lemon rind, one egg yolk and one tablespoonful of butter. Cook together in a double boiler, stirring often. Cool and spread on one of the layers. Cover the other layer and spread over it a frosting.

Creamed Cheese on Toast.

Melt four tablespoonfuls of butter, add six tablespoonfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of paprika. When well blended add three cupfuls of milk and cook until a creamy sauce is made. Add two-thirds of a cupful of good cheese, stir until melted, then add a slice of finely chopped onion—or a little scraped onion is better—two eggs well beaten and two chopped pimientos. Cook just long enough to set the egg. Serve poured over hot toast.

Creamed Oysters.

Melt one-third of a cupful of butter and add one-half cupful of flour, one teaspoonful of salt and one-fourth teaspoonful of paprika. Mix well and

THE VANISHING KNOT

AN ORDINARY piece of string is the only object that you require for the mystery of the vanishing knot. You start by tying a single knot in the string; but do not draw the knot tight. Then, to keep the knot where it belongs, you tie the ends of the string in several tight knots that would require a few minutes to untangle.

Everyone sees the single knot between the two loops. All know that it is impossible to remove that lone knot without untying the ends of the cord. Yet you have only to turn your back for three seconds and the knot is gone!

There is a simple secret to this mystery. When you turn your back, draw the single knot to the top, so it joins the tight knots at the ends of the string. Two loops have become one; and the string may be examined.

AS ONE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

ONE GOD—for when a God we need
It matters little what our creed
Or what the litany we read.

One race—when care has made us kin
It little matters what our skin,
What matters is the man within.

One land—when men must legislate,
Protect the poor, inspire the great,
The thing that matters is the state.

One world—when men must lay the stone
Of new foundations, then our own
We cannot lay for us alone.

One hope—as certain as the sun,
For all we dream of shall be done
If all we do we do as one.

INVENTS NEW STOVE
THAT MAKES OWN GAS

W. C. Coleman, Noted Inventor
Makes It Possible for Every Home
Everywhere to Enjoy Modern Gas
Cooking Service at Low Cost

Housewives everywhere are enthusiastic in their praise of a new stove that makes its own gas and brings modern gas cooking service at low cost to homes anywhere. W. C. Coleman, noted inventor and pioneer manufacturer of gas-pressure appliances, regards this stove as his crowning achievement.

The new Coleman Range makes its own gas from ordinary lead-free gasoline. Lights instantly, like gas. The flame from its fuel-saving Band-A-Blu Burners is hotter than natural gas and is easily adjusted for fast cooking or slow simmering. Its low fuel consumption makes it cheaper to use than coal, wood or kerosene.

The Coleman Range has a spacious insulated oven and drawer-type broiler. An independently controlled burner provides any heat desired for baking or broiling.

Climaxing his achievement, Mr. Coleman endowed the Coleman Safety Range with gracious beauty, style and color.

Persons wishing full information about these marvelous new Coleman Ranges, will receive beautifully illustrated literature and a valuable stove check chart by addressing a postcard to Mr. W. C. Coleman, Dept. WU-238, Wichita, Kansas—Adv.

No Need to Suffer
"Morning Sickness"

"Morning sickness"—is caused by an acid condition. To avoid it, acid must be offset by alkalis—such as magnesia.

Why Physicians Recommend
Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—the most pleasant way to take it. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system and insure quick, complete elimination of the waste matters that cause gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—I suggested in these columns a year or more ago that the campaign of 1938 would bring forth some of the most amazing oddities in political alignments that this country had ever known. It was apparent, even during the battle for ballots in 1932, that a gigantic shake-up in the voting alignment of citizens was in the making. These things are now being demonstrated and more proof of the changing times seems just around the corner.

We all have seen how such outstanding figures as former Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York, the Democratic Presidential nominee in 1928, have boldly flouted President Roosevelt and his New Deal theories and we have witnessed such vitriolic outbursts as those by former Senator James A. Reed, that old-line Missouri Democrat, and we have watched with interest the hauling and filling by Jeffersonian Democrats who find New Deal fantasies to be a bitter pill to swallow. Lately, there has come another most interesting situation respecting partisan alignment.

Although the action received much less attention than I believe it deserves, the determination of the Virginia Republicans in their recent convention at Roanoke to refrain from placing a Republican candidate in the field against Senator Carter Glass constitutes, to my mind, one of the most extraordinary twists ever to take place under our two party system. That convention, acting utterly without precedent, took the position that it was better to leave the field clear for the election of the veteran senator than to precipitate a political battle by naming a Republican candidate.

The reason for the action of the Virginia Republicans is quite clear in one way. They felt that Carter Glass, although a life-long Democrat who has carried on his share of bombardment of Republican principles and policies, could do the country more good from their standpoint than could be attained by placing a Republican candidate against him without chance of success. To state this premise in another way: Carter Glass does not swallow the New Deal as a whole and when he finds objectionable features in the Roosevelt program, he is independent enough and has the strength of character to voice his feelings. Doing this as a member of the majority party in the senate necessarily has more weight than all of the criticism of the New Deal that could be voiced by a Republican—if one could be elected in Virginia—and the Virginia convention chose a course which it believed would best serve the nation as a whole.

But it is the circumstance of a party convention refusing to engage in battle that interests me most. Under such circumstances, the old idea of party loyalty becomes not only illogical but ridiculous. Instead of a call to battle, we see what amounts to a call for support of a theoretical opponent. Of course, in the opinion of many, Carter Glass is the outstanding exponent of conservative thought in the Democratic party and if he speaks for conservative thought in the Democratic party he is almost speaking for conservative thought in the Republican party. It is easy to see, therefore, why the Virginia Republicans adopted the course they did but where does that leave party loyalty? What does it mean as to the future alignment of political thought?

The course followed by the Virginia Republicans is not more strange than the action of President Roosevelt himself who has indorsed Senator Hiram Johnson of California and Senator George Norris of Nebraska, with almost boyish enthusiasm. Senator Johnson and Senator Norris have not been regarded as regular Republicans but they have been flying the Republican banner for a good many years. Yet, the President verbally pats them on the back and offers his blessing.

During the same period, we have watched Mr. Roosevelt playing touch-and-go with the La Follette in Wisconsin. Of course, the La Follette catalogue themselves as Progressives but they never have had a great deal in common with old-line Democrats.

Likewise, in the senate if one is to believe gossip frequently bandied about, Senator McNary of Oregon, the titular Republican leader, has been only half-heartedly fighting the New Deal. In fact, some of Senator McNary's own colleagues claim that he has really given aid and comfort to their political enemies.

In the meantime, one can wander around the halls of congress and hear private observations from men who were supposed to be stalwart partisans that they have been unable to determine yet what their course ought to be. One of them remarked confidentially to me that he believed he would have to consult a clairvoyant before he could say whether he was going to support the New Deal or oppose it or try to straddle the fence. Of course, his remark was in a humorous vein but it epitomized the thought and, I may say, the worry of a very great many partisans at this time.

So, we have a picture six months ahead of the actual casting of the ballots in which party lines are torn asunder for countless hundreds of more or less important party figures. I think everyone agrees that the condition comes from the development of New Deal principles and policies under the leadership of President Roosevelt. There will be many who are now doubtful as to their course who will realign themselves with the New Deal because they were originally Democrats and there will be many who will again follow the Republican banner down the stretch. But it seems to me that three years of Roosevelt probably have established a greater segment of independent voting strength in this country than had resulted from a quarter of a century of partisan politics before. The situation must be construed then as indicating that hereafter those who stick definitely in party harness will continue to stand hatched because they have political aspirations and ambitions or because economic conditions in their communities are better fostered by the party with which they have aligned themselves. Beyond that, it seems to me, citizens, in most cases, will vote in increasing numbers for the man instead of the party.

At last, after almost two years of promotion work, President Roosevelt has abandoned two of his cherished dreams: harnessing the tides of Passamaquoddy bay in Maine and construction of a gigantic canal across Florida. The 'Quoddy project designed to produce electric power in quantities never before turned out, was to cost $40,000,000. The great job of excavating a slit across the face of the state of Florida to let ships go direct from the Atlantic to the Gulf without going around the toe of the state was to cost $150,000,000.

Only a small amount, that is, a small sum compared to other New Deal expenditures, had been wasted on the ship canal plans before it was tossed into the limbo of forgotten things, but something like $10,000,000 already has been used in the attempt to make the moon work through the medium of the tides of 'Quoddy bay. Both projects can be charged up to politics and experiments and probably the country will be better off to take the loss and avoid the use of further money.

The President fully intended to go through with his plans respecting these two projects until he ran into vicious opposition in congress. Too many representatives and senators realized that they were going to have the names 'Quoddy bay and Florida canal hurled at them through the coming campaign if they voted their approval by including additional funds for these projects in the relief appropriations. I don't know what is going to become of the homes, the model city, erected for workers near the 'Quoddy bay project. Photographs of this village indicate it to be a community of which any resident might be proud. It was constructed to assure the workers on the 'Quoddy project a comfortable place in which to live. They still have the comfortable place in which to live because the government still owns the homes but what is to become of those people and what disposition is to be made of the property is something else again. Thus, development of electric power from the tides of 'Quoddy bay has been an engineering question that has raged for years as a controversy. It has recurred frequently as a political matter but never until the New Deal came in were any tangible steps taken to install electrical equipment in that bay where the tides run higher than anywhere else in the world.

Most engineers have contended that it was impossible to place in the bay equipment that could function satisfactorily while at the same time producing electric current at a rate that would bring a return on the tremendous investment necessary. Further than that, no one yet has been able to show where so much electric energy could be marketed. The territory is sparsely settled and the industrial production is small. While it was contended that limitless power would bring industries into that section, the indications were, even after actual work started, for only a small increment in the number of factories and other users of energy.

The 'Quoddy power idea probably was the most fascinating and most romantic of anything proposed by the New Deal for the purpose of creating jobs. Like the proposed Florida ship canal, it held potentialities but those whose opinions heretofore have been sound remain unconvinced that either the power plan or the canal for a short cut across Florida ever could repay the government for money spent there.

At last, after almost two years of promotion work, President Roosevelt has abandoned two of his cherished dreams: harnessing the tides of Passamaquoddy bay in Maine and construction of a gigantic canal across Florida. The 'Quoddy project designed to produce electric power in quantities never before turned out, was to cost $40,000,000. The great job of excavating a slit across the face of the state of Florida to let ships go direct from the Atlantic to the Gulf without going around the toe of the state was to cost $150,000,000.

Lesson for May 3

JESUS TEACHES FORGIVENESS,
HUMILITY AND GRATITUDE

LESSON TEXT—Luke 17:1-19.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you—Ephesians 4:32.
PRIMARY TOPIC—The Man Who Said Thank You.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Man Who Thanked Jesus.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Three Marks of Christian Strength.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Three Marks of Christian Strength.

I. Forgiveness, a Christian Obligation (vv. 1-4).

Owing to the fundamental fact of human individuality, the perversion by sin, and the power and wickedness of the devil, offenses, or occasions of stumbling, are bound to come. Because mankind is fallen and sin reigns in individual hearts, the results are bound to reveal themselves, but Jesus pronounces "woe" upon those whose evil deeds become a stumbling stone in the way of others, especially "one of these little ones."

The follower of Christ is to take heed that his life be not injurious, but that it be exemplary. The believer is to cultivate the forgiving spirit toward the wrongdoer, while rebuking the wrong. Great skill and grace are required to rebuke one for wrongdoing, revealing at the same time the forgiving spirit, so as to win him instead of exasperating him.

II. Humility, a Christian Quality (vv. 5-10).

Humility is at the heart of this trio of Christian graces. Much faith is required to establish and maintain humility. Human nature impels one to push others aside, to struggle for supremacy, to reach the exalted positions in life. Humility moves one to seek the lowly place, while giving places of honor to others, and being sincerely happy when others are granted the preferred positions. Surely, for this one must have faith in God.

III. Gratitude, an Uncommon Grace (vv. 11-19).

The account of the ten lepers is perhaps the most used Bible portion in enforcing the lesson of gratitude as against ingratitude. There are a number of things to be considered, if we are fully to understand the call for gratitude.

1. Their awful affliction (v. 12). They were lepers. In that day no greater tragedy could befall one than to be thus afflicted. It was regarded as contagious and incurable. The afflicted person became a social outcast, and was avoided and neglected. The Mosaic law provided for segregation (Lev. 13:46).

Leprosy has always been regarded as typical of sin, and at times as visited upon individuals because of sin. Examples: the leprosy of Naaman (II Kings 5); Gehazi (II Kings 5); Miriam (Num. 12); Uzziah (II Kings 15:5).

Leprosy may lay long dormant, and then make a sudden appearance; so with sin. Leprosy waxes worse and worse; so with sin. And the end of sin is death.

2. Their cry for mercy (v. 13). The ten recognized their great need, and that no human help was available. Testimonies that had floated to their hearing told of a great Healer, and when He came their way they were not slow to make their prayer to him.

The faith of the lepers immediately revealed itself in acting upon the instructions of Jesus that they go and show themselves to the priest. While they went they were cleansed. They were to obey the Old Testament requirement for the recording of their cleansing, that they need no longer be outcasts. The sinner may find salvation along the path of daily duty, if he will but believe.

3. Their differing attitudes following healing (vv. 15-19).

a. The gratitude of the one (vv. 15, 16) is beautiful and inspiring. He is referred to as "this stranger," evidently a Gentile, but so deep was his gratitude he hastened back to Jesus to give thanks. The one who might be least expected to show gratitude was the one who sincerely expressed it.

b. The nine who neglected (vv. 17-19), who failed to give thanks, have through the centuries been charged with ingratitude. Their healing was as complete; they had as much reason to recognize Jesus as their healer as had "this stranger." Perhaps, as is true of so many believers of today, they took their benefits for granted and were indifferent rather than ungrateful. Many nowadays take all they can get from Christ and give nothing in return. The noblest blessings of civilization are ours through Christ, yet how few thank him for them.

Religion Must Come First

John Ruskin's emphatic words cannot be too often repeated: "Anything which makes religion its second object, makes religion no object. God will put up with a great many things in the human heart, but there is one thing he will not put up with in it—a second place. He who offers God a second place, offers him no place."

Loyalty

With malice towards none, and with charity for all, and firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right.

All Around the House

Wood ashes make an excellent fertilizer for shrubbery and rose bushes, also for dahlias, peonies and delphinium. Scatter ashes over soil. It makes it sweet and has a tendency to loosen it.

Sweep rugs the way of the pile. Brushing against the grain tends to brush dust in instead of out.

A simple Russian dressing is made by adding two tablespoons of chili sauce and two tablespoons of finely chopped green peppers to one cup of mayonnaise.

Purchase seldom used spices in small packages, as it is more economical since spices lose some of their flavor when exposed to the air.

If the table silver is placed in hot soapsuds immediately after being used, and dried with a soft, clean cloth, much of the work of polishing will be saved.

The tough skin that forms on top of a cornstarch pudding may be prevented if a piece of oiled paper is placed over pudding when set away to cool.

When you are basting roast beef, a tablespoon of brown or white sugar added to the gravy improves the flavor and color.

Powdered borax added to the water when washing fine white flannels helps to keep them soft.

IN MEMORIAM

KEUCH, NORMAN

In loving memory of our dear son Norman and loving brother, who passed away one year ago, May 6, 1935.

Sad and sudden was the call,
One so dearly loved by all;
It was a bitter grief, a shock severe,
To part with one we loved so dear.

We on earth in our small way
Are carrying out the plans you made,
We hope from heaven you see us,
Dear,

For we love to feel that you are near.

LOVING FATHER, MOTHER
BROTHERS and SISTERS.

NEW LENOX

By Delores Walsh

A party was given Wednesday evening in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Burton Gillette, announcing the approaching marriage of Miss Beulah Emiley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Emiley, to Mr. Charles Everett Pugh, son of Mrs. Thomas Pugh. Airplane buncos was in play at four tables, prizes being awarded to Mrs. Chas. Greenbeck, Miss Anne Vetter, and Miss Dorothy McCleary. Other games were also played. At eleven o'clock, the fourteen guests were seated at one long table, which was centered with a miniature Maypole with streamers in rainbow colors, at the end of each was found a place card in the shape of kewpies.

Each guest was given a scroll which divulged the date of the wedding. Luncheon was served by Mrs. Gillette, sister of the honored guest. Those present were: the Misses Catherine Gibbons of Hazelcrest; Marjorie Dickson of Channahon; Anna Vetter and Charlotte Leupold of Elwood; Jean Nowman of Joliet; Eunice Cryder of Morris; Mrs. Chas. Greenbeck of Minooka; Lois Walsh, Doris Pugh, Dorothy McCleary, Dolores Walsh, Mrs. Edna Collatz, Mrs. Gillette and Miss Emiley, all of New Lenox. The wedding will take place at twilight Saturday May 23 in the chapel of Christ Episcopal church, Joliet with Father Joseph Minnis, officiating.

WARNING

The following warning notice has been issued by Will County Farmers to the general public:

This is to inform you that ownership of Illinois highways over which you are privileged to drive, is held by the owners of adjoining land. Farmers are compelled to pay taxes upon all roadways, the same as upon all land under cultivation.

Your interests in public highways are limited to your right to drive upon them in a manner prescribed by law.

Any person who plucks or disturbs the growth of road-side trees, shrubs, vines, plants or flowers may be arrested and punished.

Help keep the highways beautiful.

Any person dumping rubbish on a public road-side is subject to prosecution.

Unattended automobiles parked upon country road-sides may be taken to a local garage.

Persons entering farm pastures or fields for any purpose, without owners permission, are guilty of trespass and are liable to arrest.

Will County Farmers are organized for self protection.

RELIEF BURDEN STILL REMAINS BIG PROBLEM

By LOTTIE HOLMAN O'NEILL

In expressing my appreciation of the vote given to me on April 14th I wish to assure the people of the district that I shall proceed as in the past to give the best service in my power to the work in Springfield. In line with that service I have always considered it a part of my responsibility to acquaint the people with problems that come up in Springfield and hope for their reaction and suggestions. The local newspapers in the district have been co-operative in this plan and so our people have in many instances communicated to me their satisfaction with this feature.

The problems of acute interest now facing the representatives of the people in the legislature is that of financing & administering direct relief. This is not a new problem, but some phases of it at this time differ from the past. Upon returning to Springfield after the primary election we find that the news has come from Washington that 42,000 men are to be laid off of work relief and will again become the responsibility of the state. This in the face of the total cutting off of relief funds from Washington. As a matter of fact, the government has at no time made good its promise to take over some of the relief load of employables. They have fallen short of their agreement and the state has had the burden alone for the most part. Now the state will have the additional burden very soon.

The problem of carrying the load has been discussed and a bill was introduced with the approval of the state administration which provides as follows: The creation of a relief district in each county consistent with the county lines, this district to have taking and bonding power. The people are not to have a vote on this bonding but the officials of the county will have power to issue bonds without submission to the people. The money collected to be used for relief alone. It will be noted that if this bill passes the property tax will again be in force in addition to the sales tax which was passed to take its place. It is not contemplated that any reduction should be made in the sales tax. The money so raised would be administered by the county. The additional state money from the one cent of the sales tax which is being used for relief will be administered by the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission, that is allocated to the counties according to need. This amounts to approximately two million dollars per month.

It is generally agreed that the relief burden is increasing and no one seems to be able to say when employment will increase.

The time has come when the burden of taking care of the poor is practically unbearable. Until such time as work is available it must be done. We must either put additional tax burdens on the people, or get jobs or cut the cost of government. I believe we can cut the cost of government and that it should be done. We cannot cut on education, institutions or the state's bonds. At the risk of being accused of partisanship I must say that I am sure many people are on the state payroll today that are not needed.

The relief problem is here to some extent for years to come. It is folly to continue to call special sessions of the legislature and herd the members to vote for an emergency of a few months and back again to make another effort and so on. We all agree that some permanent plan should be worked out for financing this problem. The above mentioned bill is the answer of the state administration. I shall not support it until the people of this district have a chance to study it and know what it involves. I had hoped that some reduction might be made in the sales tax but I am told by the administration leaders that this is not possible. Perhaps if we could cut down some of the departments thruout the state it might be possible.

Again risking the charge of being a partisan, I make the suggestion that it is a stupid policy that proceeds to continually add tax burdens to take care of people who cannot get a job. The logical thing is to find out how to get jobs for them. The answer appears now to both Democrats and Republicans to be found in a change in the administration in Washington. Those of us who represent working people in their legislative desires and seldom vote for the measures sponsored by so called big business must admit that there is some food for thought in the statement of the President of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce that thru fear of the national administration they are prevented from being able to provide employment for nearly all employables. What does it matter whether we have a Democratic or Republican president so long as we can solve this most important of all national problems at this time, the finding of jobs? The political futures of individuals and parties sink into insignificance compared to this solution.

Illinois is second in payment of Federal taxes and is the 21st in receipt of Federal Relief.

V. F. W. DEMANDS IMMIGRATION RESTRICTION

Reduction of all existing immigration quotas, rigid tests for all alien applicants for entrance to this country and deportation of criminal and communist aliens are among the important regulations included in bills H. R. 11172 and S. 4011, bills now pending in Congress, as being essential to the economic recovery and security of the United States.

"If this proposed legislation is enacted, relief burdens will be decreased, subversive activities will be lessened, crime would decline quickly, wages would be increased and employment speedily would move upward."

These measures would cut down alien immigration to 10 per cent of its present quotas and 75 per cent of the alien immigration permitted would be confined to foreigners having relatives in this country. Impartial tests of alien applicants to determine the suitability of the application before issuance of visas for immigration into America, and all criminal aliens and alien communists and revolutionists would be deported. Registration and finger-printing of aliens also are included in the provisions of these measures.

It is astonishing that this country has permitted its foreign-born population to become so serious a problem before any real effort has been made to control immigration and alien residents. No other country in the world has so thrown open its doors and resources to the people of the earth. The result is that we have many more million people in this country than we can furnish with employment. Remove from the United States all unnaturalized alien residents and all criminal and communist aliens who are here only for the purpose of fomenting dissension and dissatisfaction and there would be jobs available for a large proportion of our millions of American citizens now unemployed.

Strict supervision and limitation of immigration are among the legislative objectives of the V. F. W.

More than 3,400 local units in all parts of the country are conducting active campaigns to arouse the people of the country to the necessity for supporting this proposed legislation.

$50,000 Exposition Hall of Religion

It's a long way from the "gospel riders" of early Texas, who carried a pistol in their holster and a rifle in their lap as they rode around their "circuit," to the $50,000 Hall of Religion now being built on the grounds of the Texas Centennial Exposition, the $25,000,000 World's Fair which opens in Dallas June 6. Religious lore of Texas over a period of 400 years will be housed in the building, which is being sponsored and built by stockholders of the Lone Star Gas Company. From the top of the building's 75-foot tower "The Eternal Flame of Life" will burn from the Exposition's opening until its close November 29.

Radio Studios Started at Texas Exposition

This is an architect's sketch of the Gulf Oil radio studios, being built at the Texas Centennial Exposition, the $25,000,000 World's Fair opening in Dallas June 6. Here all programs from the grounds will originate for chain and local broadcasts. Glass-front studios line the court of the U-shaped building so visitors may watch the broadcasts. The largest public address system of history also operates from 250 speaker units. Twelve radio programs and 6 grounds programs can be turned into 18 different speaker units, simultaneously, each of the 18 carrying any combination of the 250 speakers. The studios will furnish pre-opening broadcasts as well as those originating during the actual Exposition period. Radio and public address engineers from all over the country already acclaim the broadcast and speaker system as the most perfect so far devised.

Canadian

Exposition's "Bluebonnet Girl"

Irene Caldwell, 22, will be official hostess to the Texas Centennial Exposition when the Southwest's big World's Fair opens in Dallas June

6. She won the right in a contest entered by more than 600 Dallas girls and will be known as the Exposition "Bluebonnet girl."

Even Texas Dogs Go High-Hat

Down Dallas way even the pups enter into the spirit of the coming Texas Centennial Exposition, which opens there June 6. Here is Bozette, seven-weeks-old, pedigreed Boston Terrier, getting into the spirit of things by using a 10-gallon hat for a kennel.

Movie Stars See Exposition Music

John Boles and Gladys Swarthout, motion picture and radio stars, visited the Texas Centennial Exposition grounds together when they were in Dallas recently. They are shown inspecting a rare, twelfth century sacred anthem, part of the historical exhibit planned by the Exposition, first Southwest World's Fair, which opens in Dallas June 6. Mr. Boles, a native Texan, told Exposition officials that dozens of Hollywood movie stars have made plans to attend the big show during its June 6-Nov. 29 run.

Folk Leader

Gertrude Knott, noted authority on folk lore, is supervising handling of the third annual national folk festival, which will open at the Texas Centennial Exposition in Dallas June 14. Special attention will be paid this year to the songs of the old Southwest. Miss Knott's staff plans to make the festival the largest on record.

Texas Exposition 150 Per Cent Over Original Size Plan

Chrysler Contract Puts Dallas World's Fair on Top in Motor Exhibits

DALLAS, Texas—The Texas Centennial Exposition today turned the home stretch toward its June 6 opening, two and one-half times larger than its sponsors originally anticipated.

From $10,000,000 value, estimated when the project was begun, the first World's Fair of the Southwest, has grown into a $25,000,000 affair, the steel framework of its construction jobs stretching down mile after mile of parallel courses.

New Building Ordered

With the signing of the Chrysler Motor Corporation for a huge display space the Exposition boasts the largest motor exhibit ever shown at a World's Fair.

Originally the $400,000 Hall of Transportation was intended to house exhibits of both transportation and petroleum industries.

So large was the space taken by Chrysler, however, that Exposition officials were forced to hurriedly realign their plans and build a separate Hall of Petroleum.

Ford, with its own building, General Motors, with a huge, air-conditioned auditorium where changing shows of radio and stage stars will be presented in one-week engagements throughout the June 6-Nov. 29 Exposition period, and Chrysler with an elaborate participation in the making, will give Dallas a record-breaking representation of the motor industry.

Livestock Also Featured

Further, the big fair will boast the largest livestock show ever assembled.

Other exhibits keep the pace, with the fully display space at a premium and officials assured of an exhibit "sell-out" long before the opening day.

Texas City of Dallas, the State of Texas and the Federal government are keeping step with their important Exposition building programs.

W. A. Webb, general manager of the Exposition who holds an international reputation for his railroad construction work, has announced every building will be completed by the June 6 opening date.

The spirit of the Old West will be recreated at every turn.

In a city as metropolitan as any in the nation, the frontier days will live again.

Ten-Gallon Hats Epidemic

Ten-gallon hats are blooming on every corner. Service stations are garbing their attendants in the cowpuncher's regalia. Department stores are clothing their elevator girls in cowgirl uniforms similar to those of Exposition Rangerettes. Other stores are donating the big hats to their employees with instructions to wear them on all occasions.

Even the Exposition police will be in full Old West attire. The Texas Rangers will have a camp on the Exposition Race Track, with a replica of an old Ranger bunkhouse as their headquarters.

Not a single detail has been overlooked by the Exposition chiefs in their efforts to make the Southwest's World's Fair the most colorful in history.

Rodeo Boss

Col. W. I. Johnson, of San Antonio, will take his world championship rodeo to the Texas Centennial Exposition at Dallas for engagements in June and September. The first will start June 6, opening day of the $25,000,000 World's Fair. Col. Johnson's rodeo is the one which has played in New York City's Madison Square Garden for the last five years.

Very Nice for Old Honus!

Recognize the gentleman? He is Honus Wagner, greatest shortstop in history and now coach of the Pittsburgh Pirates baseball team. The photograph was taken when Rangerettes from the Texas Centennial Exposition, $25,000,000 World's Fair opening at Dallas June 6, visited the team's San Antonio training camp. The girls invited President Bill Benson and the members of his team to attend the Exposition.

ORLAND

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Storz, 2847 W. Broadway, Blue Island celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last Sunday at Eagles hall in Blue Island. The couple have been residents of Blue Island for many years. They are members of the Salem Lutheran church.

There are 6 children, 14 grandchildren. The children are Mrs. Emilie Ricchio, Mrs. Lilia Ewald, Mrs. Emma Guth, sons, Rudolph, Louis, Jr. and Clarence. All live in Blue Island except Mrs. Ewald, who resides in Chicago.

There will be an orchestra and reception for relatives with refreshments from 2 p. m. on Sunday.

Mr. Storz who is 73 years old, was born in Bremen township, March 23, 1863. He is the son of John and Martha Storz. The following sisters of Mr. Storz are still living: Mrs. Augusta Dorre of Congress Park; she is 86. Mrs. Minnie Groskopf, Mrs. Emma Rust and Mrs. Pauline Rothenberger of Blue Island. One brother, Henry or Orland Park, is 84.

Mrs. Storz, prior to her marriage, was Louise, the daughter of Leonard and Katherine Rothenberger. She was born in Palos, May 13, 1866. Living sisters are Mrs. Minnie Schelchase of Frankfort; Mrs. Annie Lochow of Courteney, N. D. and two living brothers, Edward of Tinley Park and William of Orland Park.

The couple were married April 25, 1886—which was an Easter Sunday. The ceremony was performed at Bachelor Grove church by Rev. T. Buenger. A quarter of a century ago when the Storz celebrated their silver wedding anniversary Mr. Storz was alderman of the second ward.

He is a charter member of the Salem church.

There are four great grandchildren Those attending from Orland were: Henry Storz, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Schmaedeke, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Eberling, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Grosskopf.

The Orland Park R. N. A. held their monthly meeting last Thursday. The charter was draped in memory of Mrs. Grange who recently passed away.

The Orland Park Vol. Fire Department will meet next Monday night at which time the officers will be appointed and other business transacted.

Due to the press of other business matters the mayor did not make his annual appointments of committees and chairmen of the same. At the first meeting in May Wm. Kollman will appoint these chairmen and the committees, also the chief of the fire department.

John Burkhardt held his last pinochle party of the season Monday night. A good sized crowd attended. Walter Moore and family have moved to Goodings Grove.

Louis Raschke is having an addition built to his lunch room and tavern at the corner of 159th street and Keane avenue.

Barney Moore celebrated his birthday with a big party last Saturday night, one hundred guests being present. The guests made merry until the wee small hours of the morning. The final meeting of the Orland Park PTA for this season will be held at school auditorium May 14.

A group of women from the local M. E. church attended the Southwest meeting of the Ladies Aid Societies of the M. E. church held at Peotone Tuesday.

The Orland Child Welfare Clinic will be held on May 13th in the Orland Park school auditorium.

SYNOPSIS

The Duke, Barry Gilbert, likable youth of twenty-three, jobless and broke, enters an unoccupied summer home in Southampton, seeking shelter from a storm. He makes himself at home. Dozing at the fireplace, he is startled by the arrival of a butler, Willetts, and a chauffeur, Evans. He learns that the son of the owner of the house, Jack Ridder, whom the servants had never seen, is expected. He decides to bluff it out. His supposed parents have left for Germany. Next morning he is given a letter for his "mother." He opens it and finds a message from the real Jack, saying he could not come, and returning a hundred-dollar bill. The boy's father had pensioned him into obscurity. Barry pockets the money, intending to return it later. He orders Evans to take him to Montclair, intending to disappear there. On the way he meets Judge Hambridge and his daughter, Patricia. Believing he is Jack Ridder, she invites him to dinner the following Thursday. Barry returns to Southampton, deciding to stay a bit longer. Mr. Ridder, Sr., through his newspaper, the Globe, accuses Judge Hambridge of taking orders from Tammany Hall in a condemnation proceeding. Barry meets Peter Winslow, prominent attorney. Winslow tells Barry that Judge Hambridge had seen an accident in which a woman was killed by a taxi cab. At home Barry finds the wife of the real Jack Ridder awaiting him. Her husband is in jail in New York, charged with the murder of Mike Kelly, Tammany boss. The girl, Peggy, tells Barry how she had met Jack in Florida and married him, as Jay Rogers. Jack lost his job, and they went to New York, where she got work at the Cocoanut Bar. There she was accused of trying to pick the pocket of Mike Kelly, and was arrested. Her husband went to Kelly's to induce him to drop the charge. Later Kelly was found dead, his skull crushed by a decanter. Barry suggests he can help Jack Ridder, and Mrs. Rogers agrees. Judge Hambridge delivers a decision in the condemnation suit in which Kelly had been interested.

CHAPTER III—Continued

"Did you ever see Kelly?"

"No."

"He was enormous. Must have been six-feet-two in his stockings. I'm five-feet-five in mine. I'd've had to stand on a chair to hit him on top of the head."

"Unless he was sitting in one."

"The body wasn't anywhere near a chair. It was up against the door to the hall. The paper says so. The Filipino got in through the dining room. I got out through the hall door. He saw me. How did I do that, if Kelly was lying against it?"

"I don't know."

"Two more things: The lights were burning full tilt when I left. I could see Kelly's shadow on the blinds as I passed the house on my way home. Were they still burning when the butler came in the next morning? And, if not, who turned 'em out?"

"What's the other item?"

"The other item's the crux of the whole business," Jack answered. "Mike rushed me out because the phone rang, and the fellow that rang it was coming over to talk to him. Did he come? If not, why not? And, if that fellow did come, isn't it likely that he's the guy that killed Kelly?"

CHAPTER IV

It was long after one o'clock when they walked out of the Tombs.

She was all in now. Barry splurged on a taxi to take her "home" to the dingy boarding house where the disowned Ridders lived, in the upper Forties. In spite of her protests, Barry kept his word as to giving her most of that hundred and fifty. "It isn't mine," he declared.

"We'll eat together Monday, after I've talked to Winslow. I'll be around about six o'clock."

It was two now—a warmish Saturday afternoon. Nearly forty-eight hours before he could hope to find the attorney. Any inexpensive hotel would do. He registered at one a few blocks from Peggy's. "Barry Gilbert," he wrote.

From his new residence, Barry went to the Astor, and cabled Mrs. Ridder. The message read:

"Making good stop water-wagon and on track of a job stop friend of mine met in Florida locked up for murder didn't commit crime can you arrange credit here up to two thousand dollars stop won't use unless necessary for friend and will return every penny stop wire Peter Winslow lawyer for confirmation if desired stop this is my big chance to do something worth while stop writing details all's well don't hurry back love, John."

"I'll need that two thousand quick," Barry thought. "Winslow'll want a retainer, and there'll be a lot of other things." Barry wondered what to do with his forty-eight hours. "I'll stroll down to Kelly's place," he decided, "and give it the once-over."

From Sixth avenue, he turned into 16th street, and stopped before what the tabloids were calling "the scene of the murder." It was an old-fashioned red-brick house, with a bay window, and a heavy front door. A policeman stood guard, and a group of the curious loitered as near as they dared.

Remarkable; Barry thought, how people could stand staring at anything connected with a tragedy.

There was another little group at the corner, where workmen were putting in a new traffic light standard. Broken off short, its predecessor lay on the pavement. Having nothing better to do, Barry asked, "What's the excitement?"

"Taxi smash."

"When?"

"Just before two o'clock yesterday morning. Killed a woman. Crushed her right up against that post. Broke it off short. Don't seem possible."

No wonder the Judge was "upset."

Curious, Barry thought, these two violent deaths within a few yards and a few hours of each other. Curious, too, that the Judge's stroll should have brought him so near the house in which Kelly lay murdered, but no more remarkable than the series of events that had involved Barry in the whole affair. "Life's full of coincidences," Barry mused. "It's only in fiction that people pay much attention to 'em. Winslow said the Judge went for a walk, and that's the simplest explanation of the whole matter."

He was at the attorney's office before ten o'clock on Monday morning. He was ushered into the pleasantly furnished corner room that was Peter's. The lawyer rose, as Barry entered, and came forward, one hand outstretched, and the other holding a newspaper. "The early bird, eh?"

"I'm not exactly looking for worms," Barry replied. "I want that position we were talking about, if I can get it, but, just now, I'm a lot more interested in this Kelly murder. You've read about that, I suppose."

Peter nodded.

"I saw the headlines after you left the Hambridges on Friday," he said. "I didn't bother about it much then. But, this morning, I found Saturday's Herald Tribune on my desk. And, of course, I'm always interested in murders."

"I know the boy who's accused of this crime," Barry said.

"You do? That's exciting. Tell me about it."

Barry did, omitting only the detail of Ridder's identity.

"I met them in Florida," he related. "Rogers worked in a hotel there. I liked the girl even then. She'd been putting up such a game fight to make a man of her husband, and was succeeding so wonderfully. I suppose I'm the only friend they've got around here, and that's why she came to me."

Winslow listened sympathetically.

"That sort of thing always gets me," he observed. "A woman tied up to some man who's not worthy of her, and in love with him."

"This boy's not so bad," Barry argued. "And it's a lead-pipe cinch that he didn't kill Kelly."

"Think so."

"Dead sure."

"All right. Make me sure."

Barry tried.

"There was someone else coming when Jack left," he concluded. "If he came, he either found Kelly dead, in which case he'd've given the alarm, or he found Kelly alive, in which case, of course, Jack didn't kill him."

"Very ingenious," Peter remarked. "But what makes you think someone else was coming?"

"That's why Kelly fired Jack out."

"Who says so?"

"Jack—and Peggy."

"Not very conclusive," Peter objected.

"Who do you think did it?"

"I'm not concerned as to who did it," Peter declared. "Only as to who didn't."

"Jack didn't. You'd know that if you looked at him."

"I feel sorry for the girl. I'll go down to see Rogers. Somebody ought to've gone—long ago—to file an appearance. There shouldn't have been any preliminary hearings without proper representation."

"You'll take the case, then?"

"I suppose so. Now, how about that job I thought we might land at my brother's?"

"I certainly need it."

"Let's see if he's in."

"Get Jamison Winslow," he instructed the operator.

In a few minutes the phone rang.

"That you, Jimmy?" Peter said into it.

"You've heard of John Clarke Ridder, haven't you? Well, his son's in here, and wants work. How about it? Got anything over there?"

The instrument made raucous noises.

"All right," Peter continued, at last. "I'll send him around, and you talk to him."

"Chrysler building," he informed Barry, "and he's waiting for you."

"I don't know how to thank you."

"What for?"

"Mainly for helping two people in a lot of trouble."

Peter smiled once more.

"That inside-job theory sticks to my mind," Barry remarked. "Is there a Mrs. Mike Kelly?"

Peter laughed outright.

"You're determined to be Sherlock Holmes, aren't you?" he asked. "All right. There is a Mrs. Mike Kelly. I'd just finished reading about her. She sued for divorce recently and withdrew the case. Do you think that might indicate that she killed her husband?"

"Cherchez la femme, you know."

Peter laughed again.

"Search for the woman," he translated. "But, then, there appear to have been a good many women in Kelly's life. We mustn't jump at conclusions."

"No," Barry admitted. "No, I suppose not."

"All the same," he thought, the other side of the door, "it's pretty evident that a woman who sues for divorce is a little bit anxious to get rid of her husband."

But there was nothing doing at Jamison Winslow's.

"I'm sorry," he said, "but we're laying off men every day now. Why aren't you on your father's newspaper?"

"My father and I haven't been very friendly."

"So I've heard. But I've got an idea. That's what I wanted to talk to you about."

It was quite a simple idea.

"We place thousands of dollars worth of advertising with The Globe. And I know the city editor pretty well. His name's Harwood. If I gave you a letter to Ernie, and he gave you a job, and you made good while the boss is in Europe, wouldn't that square things when he got back?"

Barry grinned.

"It might," he said, "and then again it might not."

"What I heard," Jamison Winslow went on, "was that your father wanted you in his business. If that's true, he'd certainly be pleased at your going in."

"I'd like to succeed on my own."

"Well, why not? We don't have to tell Harwood who you are. Not in the beginning, anyway."

"That is an idea," Barry agreed. "Since the row, I've been calling myself Barry Gilbert."

"Not a bad pen name," Jamison Winslow declared. "All right; we'll stick to it. I've a hunch that you'd make a good newspaper man."

"That's what your brother said."

Ten minutes later, Barry Gilbert—himself again, so to speak—was on his way to The Globe.

The Globe occupied a new and imposing building in Thirty-ninth street. Asking for Mr. Harwood, Barry found himself in the city room. Men in their shirt sleeves sat at desks, smoking and pounding on typewriters, and most of the people who had rushed in and out of the elevators rushed in and out of the double doors. Harwood's office proved to be a small and comparatively quiet cubby-hole just off the concourse.

He had always been a newspaper man. Square cut, not very tall, but with big hands and broad shoulders, his hair was as red as Barry's. He had been John Clarke Ridder's city editor when John Clarke was a reporter, and he remained John Clarke's city editor still. John Clarke's friend, too, with more real power, and ability, than any other man on The Globe.

Now he glanced at the Winslow letter, and grunted.

"Think you can write, I suppose?"

"Pretty sure I can't."

"Then what're you gonna do on a newspaper?"

"Get news."

Ernie Harwood looked him over.

"How?"

"Well, just now, it happens that I'm a friend of Jay Rogers."

"The fellow that killed Mike Kelly?"

"The fellow they say killed him."

"Yeah?"

Ernie squinted into the bowl of his pipe.

"How long have you known Jimmy Winslow?" he inquired.

"About half an hour. His brother asked him to get me a job."

"Peter Winslow?"

"Yes."

"Peter Winslow going to defend Rogers?" he snapped.

"Yes."

Ernie reached for a telephone.

"Peter Winslow's defending the Rogers boy," he barked into the instrument. "If it's straight, play it up in the next edition."

To Barry he said, "How did you get Winslow to take the case?"

For the second time, Barry related his story of meeting the Rogers in Florida. From there, he jumped to the visit of Mrs. Rogers, repeating what she had told him, and dilating upon their interview with the boy in the Tombs.

"What did he say?" Harwood asked.

"I don't feel at liberty to repeat that until I've spoken to Peter Winslow," Barry answered, "but it's given me two clues that I'd like to follow up."

"All right," Ernie said. "Follow 'em. Your salary's fifty dollars a week. Report straight to me."

"Yes, sir."

"Wait a minute. I'll put you next to somebody who'll introduce you at police headquarters. We've got that angle covered, of course, but you'd better be in touch there. What I want you to do is to follow your own leads. Bring in something."

"Roth, come here!" he called. "I want you to take Mr. Gilbert down to the homicide bureau."

Nothing seemed entirely impossible that bright mid-May morning, as Barry swung into Broadway.

Up to now, he owed everything to his imposture—that first stake, the clothes he wore, Peter Winslow's favor, and all that had followed. They constituted an amazingly fortuitous chain of circumstances. But the chain had lifted him to solid ground. "It's up to me now," Barry said, feeling square with himself, and the world, and strangely gay and self-confident.

"I'm going to start right," he said, "by paying those bills, and giving Peggy the rest of that two hundred. I'm going to figure up my board and room at Southampton, and give her that, too. A fellow like me can't afford to be crooked."

Lice Bother to Heifers, Calves

Early Attention Is Advised to Save Animals From Losing Weight.

By Fred M. Haig, Associate Professor of Animal Husbandry and Dairying, North Carolina State College—WNU Service.

Cattle lice are a serious handicap to the development of calves and heifers.

When infested with lice, the young animals rub against posts and trees, wearing away their hair and inflaming their skin. Sometimes the calves become thin and weak from loss of weight.

In the early spring dairymen should inspect their calves to see whether they are infested with lice.

The insects are found mostly around the necks and shoulders of the animals, but they also infest other parts of the body.

The first step in eradicating lice is to clean and disinfect the stalls thoroughly. After removing the bedding and sweeping the stalls, disinfect them with a 5 per cent solution of any good coal tar disinfectant.

Allow the stalls to dry, then whitewash the interior. When the whitewash is dry place plenty of straw bedding or other clean material in the stalls.

Meanwhile, apply to the calves a solution of one ounce of sodium fluoride in a gallon of water. Brush it in thoroughly so that it will reach every part of the body and penetrate loose folds of skin.

Tie the animals in a sunny place, protected from drafts, until they are dry. The calves are then ready to be placed back in the newly disinfected stalls and a second treatment will hardly be necessary unless they become infested again from other animals.

Good Plan to Let Garden Spot Rest for One Year

Since home gardens are generally maintained on the same spot year after year, liberal applications of manure should be given each fall and turned under to maintain fertility. When this is done the manure will be rotted by spring and if plowed again in spring this new and rich plant food will be readily available for the vegetable crop. If the manure has not been applied in the fall, then rotted manure can be applied in the spring, or a light dressing of chicken or sheep manure can be given, even after the crops are planted. Twenty-five tons of stable manure to the acre, preferably cow manure, will keep garden soil in good condition, according to a writer in the Missouri Farmer.

Many farmers believe that too much chicken manure has been applied to farm gardens. Of all manures, chicken manure is richest and, lacking in bulk as compared with cow or horse manure mixed with straw, it does not leave the soil in as loose condition as is desirable. Too heavy applications, as every farmer knows, will cause the plants to burn if the weather be dry.

What would do many farm gardens a lot of good would be one year's rest with the plot sowed to red clover. If for one year the garden vegetables could be raised on a different plot of ground, the old plot sown to red clover with the crop plowed under, a vast improvement in richness and looseness of soil would be the result.

Rubber Beats Steel

Rubber tires have scored another victory over steel in tests made by 14 experiment stations and summarized by the United States Department of Agriculture. The score was "96 per cent in favor of low-pressure pneumatic tires over steel tires for wheel tractors of the general-purpose type in the performance of numerous routine draft operations of the average farm under favorable soil conditions." The states ranged from California to Ohio and from Michigan to Texas. The rubber-tired tractors pulled better and saved fuel. They did not perform well, without chains, in mud or wet soil. It was found better to have a pressure of only 16 pounds in rear tires, while 26 pounds worked best for front wheels. Estimates place number of rubber-tired tractors in use in United States at more than a million.—The Country Home.

Fever Caused by Ticks

Until Dr. Theobald Smith discovered the cause of Texas cattle fever in 1888 the annual loss from this disease was $40,000,000 a year. Doctor Smith performed experiments in the Southwest, as an employee of the United States Department of Agriculture, and by means of observing healthy and unhealthy animals kept inclosed pastures under controlled conditions, and by means of vivisection, he was able to find the tick causing the disease, which for 30 years previous to that time had impoverished many cattle raisers in all sections of the world.—Medical Society of the State of New York.

Nodular Disease in Sheep

The embryo of the internal parasite which causes nodular disease in sheep is the cause of nodules inside the intestines. It is difficult if not impossible to give medicine which will kill or remove these nodules without injury to the sheep; therefore medical treatment is not effective. Once badly infested there is little hope of successfully treating the sheep. Prevention by rotation and raising lambs in dry lots off pasture is the only effective measures for controlling this disease.

Champion of the Oil Fields

ASK any Texas or Oklahoma oil driller who's the best in his business and he's pretty certain to answer "Why, Kemp Morgan, of course!"

Ask him why and he'll tell you it's because Kemp had more unusual experiences than any other seeker after "black gold" ever did.

For instance there was the time Kemp lost his best drill. He was working in soft ground but he noticed that the drill kept going slower and slower the farther it went down. Pretty soon it stopped completely. When Kemp tried to pull it out, it was stuck fast. Come to find out that he had hit an alum mine and the hole had shrunk up around the drill so tight that even Kemp couldn't budge it.

Then there was the time a Texas "norther" swooped down on Kemp's rig. But it didn't stop him—no sirree! He just kept on drilling, and brought in a 22-inch gusher. It was so cold that the oil froze as it spurted upward so there was a solid column of frigid oil. Kemp just took out his knife, hacked it off in three-foot lengths and shipped it to the refinery on flat cars.

That was in Texas but Kemp had a funny experience once in Oklahoma. He drilled a well so deep that it tapped a rubber mine way down in Brazil. She began to gush pure rubber, so Kemp just blew his hot breath on it to make it solid, cut it off in 11-foot lengths and shipped it to that place in Ohio where they make solid tires for trucks.

When the average driller brings in a "duster," he moves his rig away from there pronto. But not Kemp Morgan! He knew what a tough time the Kansas farmers had digging postholes in the summer when the ground was baked hard. So whenever he'd strike a dry hole, he'd just take his two hands, pull it up four feet and two inches at a time and saw it off. Then he'd ship a carload of these lengths across the state line where they always found a market.

Private Life of Jonah

IT WASN'T a whale which swallowed Jonah, theorizes Stanley Suchwalko, it was a big-mouthed fish in northern Michigan. His friend, Laddie Hornik, captured the monster in 1930.

Laddie inspected the fish, which had laid down its life while being hooked, gaffed and beaten over the head with a pair of oars, and couldn't decide what to do with it. The size seemed to destroy the fish's commercial value and imagine Laddie's surprise, says Stanley, when the first stranger to arrive bid a fabulous price for the fish's scales.

Laddie yelled "Sold!" Then he recovered his poise, sheared off the scales, counted the money and watched the stranger bear the scales away.

"What'll you do with 'em?" asked Laddie.

"I'm a spade manufacturer from Moline, Ill.," replied the buyer. "I've got material here for 6,400 spades of the best chilled steel."

Buyer after buyer paid staggering prices for different parts of the fish and Laddie, says Stanley, didn't get wise until a tremendous price was bid and accepted for the fish's stomach.

The stomach buyer immediately slit open the fish's belly and revealed the golden throne upon which Jonah had been seated during his long captivity.

"It's cheap at half the price," stated the buyer with pardonable satisfaction as he brushed a stray fin from his precious purchase.

The Despondent Grasshoppers

A SEASONED maxim of the copy books is that frequently a real cry does a person good. Leonard Balier, once a Nebraska farmer, is sure of it.

Rain washed away the railroads around his Nebraska lands; the drought hit him squarely; then the dust storms killed every living thing and his land was dry as the inside of a grain bin. At this moment, the grasshoppers arrived by millions and settled on his farms.

Wasn't a thing for the 'hoppers to eat but they were too tired to move on and Leonard almost lost hope. As a last gesture, however he rushed out among the despondent grasshoppers, sitting there in the dust, and planted several sets of the strongest and hardest onions he could buy.

To his surprise the onions matured quickly. The moment their bulbs appeared above ground the grasshoppers pounced on them, ate ravenously and burst into tears.

"And that," Leonard recalls proudly, "is how my farms were saved. The land was drenched by the tears of the grasshoppers and as soon as they had drowned themselves I was able, of course, to raise a normal crop."

Oldest Temple-Fort Found

by Explorers in the Orient

A prehistoric architect's conception of a combined citadel and temple of worship, antedating by nearly three centuries the earliest biblical reference to temple fortresses, has been uncovered by archeologists at Tepe Gawra, in northern Mesopotamia. It was announced at the University of Pennsylvania. The discovery and excavation of the massive walled "round house," a circular building of sun brick unique among all prehistoric finds, climaxed the seventh season of work at the "Great Mound" 15 miles northeast of Mosul by a joint expedition of the university museum and the American Schools of Oriental Research.

Business Upturn

Each week a small red-headed lad delivers a magazine to office workers in various downtown buildings. Recently, the boy appeared, but without his magazine. The man reached in his pocket for his money, and then, noting the absence of the magazines, asked where they were. The boy turned and called to a lad even smaller than "Red-Head." "My brother," Red-Head said, "He's helping me today. Business is so good that I need a helper; you know, some one to carry the magazines and watch the money."

The Motorist's Daughter

A little girl was crossing the Atlantic with her mother. It was her first ocean trip. The sea was as smooth as the proverbial millpond for the first three days, then the ship began rolling and pitching heavily. The child could not understand what had happened, "Mamma," she cried, "What's the matter? Are we on a detour?"
